

Invitation for Applications: Technical and Teaching Assistants for online courses for adults 55+

PrimeLife Arts Learning (PAL) invites people with on-line virtual teaching experience, and those interested in learning more about Creative Aging, to apply to support our online program.

The mission of PrimeLife Arts Learning is to inspire 55+ adults to explore their creativity; to build stronger relationships and bridge connections to new communities; and to advocate for equity and anti-ageism in arts learning.

We are currently seeking people to provide on-line technical support for lead Teaching Artists during classes. Artists will lead all art forms and styles, e.g. visual arts, music, dance, theatre, creative writing, and digital media.

PAL Technical and Teaching Assistant responsibilities Include:

- Assist the lead Teaching Artist with in-class technical support, such as monitoring chats and questions from participants as they arise.
- Providing registration support and platform navigation for participants
- Prepare with the lead Teaching Artist prior to each session to identify particular technical needs.
- Informally engage with participants as they gather before each and after session.

PAL selects Technical and Teaching Assistants who embody the following qualities:

- Interest in virtual Creative Aging teaching.
- A willingness to provide support and collaborate with others including Teaching Artists and administrators.
- A willingness to engage with participants to answer questions and provide other support as needed.
- Prior experience with digital learning platforms, such as LearnWorlds (highly recommended).
- Strong appreciation of the arts, including regular artist practice (preferred).

Compensation:

The Technical and Teaching Assistants pay scale range is $40-65/hour, depending on the project. Training and planning time is also compensated.
